Charity organizations are responsible for most of the help extended to poor and needy people. Each organization helps a different group of people.

The Red Cross is a well-known organization that has centres in countries all over the world. It had its beginnings in a small Italian town in 1859. At that time, a big battle happened, and over 40,000 people were injured. The army did not have enough doctors or nurses. A Swiss businessman saw this terrible situation and wrote a book about it. His book helped people understand the problem and led to the creation of charity organizations

Today, many countries follow the Red Cross's example. They carry out fund raising activities to help children who cannot receive an education or victims of natural disasters. Both the young and old contribute willingly to these organizations. In fact, without these charity organizations, millions of people around the world would perish because of poverty or natural disasters.

In India, a kind woman started PUSS (Palli Unnayan Sevi Samiti). Supported by social workers and teachers, she has helped hundreds of children receive a proper education. Without her help, the literacy rate in India would be much lower than what it is today.

Charity organizations are crucial today. They cannot function without the kind and helpful people who help to run these organizations.
