afford (v)	/ə'fɔ:d/	to be able to buy or do something because you have enough money or time

unemployment (n)	/,ʌn.ɪm'plɔɪ.mənt/	the number of people who do not have a job that provides money

Unstressed words in connected speech

In connected speech, most grammatical words are not usually stressed. These words include:

- articles: a, an, the
- prepositions: above, for, of, to, until, etc.
- personal pronouns: I, you, we, they, he, she, it
- possessive adjectives: my, your, our, their, her, his, its
- auxiliary verbs: be, have, do, etc.
- conjunctions: and, but, or, etc.
- modal verbs: can, will, etc.
- the expressions: there is, there are, etc.

Present perfect (review and extension)

• We use the present perfect to describe something that started in the past and is still happening now, or something that was completed in the very recent past.

Example:

A lot of young people have moved to big cities to work or study.

• We also use the present perfect to say how many times something has happened with the following structure:

It/This/That + be + the first/the second time + Subject + have/has (done)...

Example:

This is the second time I have visited this city.

It is not the first time I have heard about urbanisation.

• We often use the present perfect for a unique experience with the following structure:

It/This/That/Noun or Gerund phrase + be + the best/the worst/the only/the most beautiful/ + Subject + have/has (ever done) ...

Example:

That is the worst meal I have ever had in this city.

Moving to the city is the best decision my parents have ever made in their life.

Double comparatives to show change

• We use double comparatives to show change.

Example:

Towns are getting bigger and bigger.

The air is becoming more and more polluted.

There are more and more high-rise buildings in the city.

• We also use double comparatives to say that two things change together.

Example:

The bigger the city gets, the more crowded it becomes.

The more we invest in rural areas, the more we can help people there.
