Becoming independent is an important step in a young person's life. It means learning to make decisions on your own and taking responsibility for your actions. Many teenagers begin this journey when they start (21) _____ their time, money, and studies without relying too much on others.

One of the most important skills is time management, which helps students balance schoolwork and personal activities. Without this skill, it is easy to become stressed or fall behind. Another key aspect is financial responsibility. Learning how to save and spend wisely is essential (22) _____ it prepares individuals for future challenges.

In addition, independent people often develop strong problem-solving abilities. They learn from their mistakes and become more confident in difficult situations. Although becoming independent can be challenging at first, it is a valuable experience that builds character.

Parents and teachers play an (23) _____ role in this process. They should give guidance but also allow young people to make their own choices. By doing so, students will gradually grow into responsible and capable adults, ready to face the world (24) _____ their own.

Ultimately, independence is not about being alone; it is about being able to rely on yourself and make wise decisions.
